(Published by request.) To My Sister. BY MRS. P. L. HANEY.

I am coming, dearest sister, Don't you see me on the way? I am coming, dearest sister, To the land of perfect day.

'Tis a strange and silent pathway, But it cheers my heart to think You promised you would meet me Down by the river's brink. I have never crossed the river,

Nor felt its chilly tide ; I have never seen the country On the river's other side. So you see I am a stranger In the land that is your home, And I'll need you, dearest sister, To conduct me when I come.

And take me by the hand : Show me all the glories of The happy spirit-land. For I know the pearly portals For me will open wide,

For the passport that I carry, With my Saviour's blood is dyed. O lead me first to Jesus. I am longing so to see

And sister, do not mind it, If I drop your hand a while To bathe his feet with kisses, And to bask me in his smile.

And all the saints above, I feel that I would clasp them All in my arms of love; But when I think of Jesus-Of the glory of his face,

Then I think you need not lead me To any other place. I am coming, dearest sister, But I'm sure I cannot tell

In the country where you dwell; But meet me sister, meet me, I shall know you by your smile, And lead me right to Jesus, And leave me there awhile. Caistorville, July, 1874.

A Young Girl Captured—She is Rescued

by Officer Filkins. The Waterville Times of the 14th inst. ells a tale which exhibits the well-known Loomises in a new light. On the 6th nst., Deputy Sheriff Filkins, of Waterville, received a note which informed him that Grove Loomis had a girl at his house named Cora A.twood, whom he had enticed there by lying and for the Peter Woodin to Charles Breed, 48 purpose of ruining her. The Times tells how the girl was rescued from the hands of the Loomises:

At our annual school meeting we had the usual amount of fun. The ballot revealed the fact that the old trustee must act another year. The other officers were elected by acclamation. The following are the officers elected: Trustee, Edwin Palmer; Clerk, B. C. Perrington; Colector, Otis Butrick; all of them reelected except the Clerk, and he was absent. This District believes it to be very unwise to change officers as often as other Districts do. They believe that the continuance of the same officers from year to year gives stability and confidence in our schools, and leads to a higher intellectual attainment. Where the officers of the schools are permanent there they have the best schools, and in those schools there will be the least change of teachers. During the past year our average attendance has been 100-10 nore than the previous year. We report 215 children to draw public money -20 more than the year previous.

Another veteran in the great battle of life is gone, another one who has left the spirit's casket to moulder in the grave, and has "softly breathed his last goodbye." Ezra Thayer, of this town, passed on to spirit life Saturday morning, Oct. 17, 1874, aged 84 years. Friday even ing he retired as well as usual. Saturday morning, at 6 o'clock, he was sleeping as usual, and a short time after it was discovered that he was dead; and he died without a struggle or groan in just su e manner as he had often expressed a wish to die. For 51 years he has been a resident of this town, and on the same premises where he died. He was a very ntelligent man for one of his opportunities; very positive in his views, and very decided, and was willing to accord to others the same privileges. Like one of old, he gave "commandment concerning his bones." He selected a beautiful eminence on Mr. James David's land for his burying place—a place overlooking his home, and where one or more of his children were buried. He selected his pall-bearers from among his neighbors, and the one to dig his grave, likewise. No clergyman was to officiate at his funeral by way of preaching a sermon or offering a prayer. He was to be quietly buried, and then his friends and neighbors might assemble at some convenient lace for a social meeting, not to mourn is death, but rather to rejoice that he his customers. had gone to a better clime, where his wife was, and his neighbors were, and angels too. His desires were carried out to the letter. After his burial on Sunday last, his friends and neighbors immediately convened at his residence, and were addressed by Warren Woolson and A. H. Morse. Both of them spoke of his life and of the immortality of the

For years previous to his death, Mr Thayer had expressed to his friends and neighbors a perfect willingness to die, and not only willing but rather anxious. He did not look upon death as a "king of terrors," but as a happy event. His favorite topic of conversation was heaven, his future home. We have never conversed with an individual in our life that was so willing to die as Mr. Thayer.

Benjamin; a New York Thanksgiving Story, a Coon Story, and an interesting Ghost Story. Then there are practical articles, such as "The Transit of Venus;" "How the Cars Stopped;" 'Yusuf," an Eastern Sketch; "Venus of Milo;" "Legends and Superstitions," by N. S. Dodge; "A Billy-Goat Schoolmaster;" "The Aard Vark," with illustrations of this curious animal, and an article on the construction of East India Toys. There are poems by Dr. J. G. Holland, Anna C. Brackett, Mary E. Bradley, and Mary Mapes Dodge, "H. H." tells about the "Ants' Monday Dinner;" Alice Williams has a sketch, full of delicate fancy, called "The Marriage of the Gold Pen and the Inkstand;" and there are some capital boys' letters from "Dick Hardin at the Sea-shore." The illustrations this month deserve special commendation. W. L. Sheppard has a spirited frontispiece, and several smaller pictures. Sol Eytinge, Jr., contributes two capital pictures, and Granville Perkins has a beautiful view of a Florida Bayou. Then there are comic notices have tinge, Jr., contributes two capital pictures, and Granville Perkins has a beautiful view of a Florida Bayou. An Interesting Descriptive Report.

We have at last received from our correspondent the report of the Clerc Memorial dedication, which had been promised previous to our leaving Hartford. We had expected to have it ready for publication the next week after our return, but our correspondent, after having untiringly discharged his duties as Secretary of the Union, was utterly tired out, mind and body, when the dedication was all over, and sought rest for a few days. The report having been re-ceived, we will let him supplement what has already been published in the Journal; and as his is a very accurate and minute account of the dedication, written in a lively style, it will add much interest to the outline of the proceedings already given. Being rather lengthy, we will have to continue it in a which appears in this week's issue.

Personal.

Rev. Mr. Krans, of Boston, com menced his duties as assistant to Rev. Dr. Gallaudet, on Sunday, the 4th inst. He is to pay attention more particularly to the hearing portion of the parish, thus leaving Rev. Dr. Gallaudet and work among the deaf-mutes.

The October Annals.

The Quarterly is very readable this month. "Economy in Teaching," by Richard Elliott, of England, leads the articles, and endeavors to show that under a proper classification the average teacher could instruct fifty pupils not only as well as, but also better than he could the traditional fifteen. Mr. Elliott has embodied a good deal of what he afterwards writes, in the opening sentence of his article: "It seems to be the tendency of the present age to do everything on a large scale." Certainly. But does it follow that everything is therefore better done? We will not go into a list of some of those things which, being turned out by the wholesale, we are never satisfied with. In deaf-mute instruction, experience seems to tell us that we have been doing things on a large scale quite long enough, and that the sooner we come down a peg or two, the better will we accomplish our work.

Mr. Elliott seems to have a dim idea of what constitutes the "mere-drudgery of the teacher's work." His common sense view of bringing every inaccuracy. ome to its author as effectually as if it had been detected by the teacher himself, looks better, we fear, in theory than in practice. Life is made up of small things, and especially is this true of a deaf-mute's education. The more want of the teacher's personal attention to a host of trivial things, has often under mined an intellectual foundation that otherwise would be strong and lasting.

Of course there would be an apparent economy in this doubling and trebling of the number in a class, for fewer teachers would then be required, and the money thus saved by the reduction of the force, would come handy to allow, in the words of Mr. Elliott, "a greater ability on the part of the committees of institutions to reward the teachers in their employ." The author, in common with a good many others, evidently has no objection to being allowed nine lives to yield up at the altar of deaf-mute instruction, always provided he is liberally paid for the sacrifice of each. Altogether too much has been done of late in measuring the welfare of the deaf and dumb in dollars and cents.

Mr. J. Scott Hutton contributes the first of a series of posthumous papers of his father, George Hutton. They promise to be of interest.

Mr. Pettengill, of Philadelphia, has a sensible article on the acquisition of written language by deaf-mutes. Mr. Pettengill owns that he does not think as he used to regarding the proper way to teach language to the deaf; he also takes good care to tell us that he is not the only one whose opinions have undergone a radical change. Finding himself in such good company he has become enthusiastic and his article is an excellent one. But it strikes us that the writer is a little too precipitate in his condemnation of the practice of requiring pupils to write sentences on given words and phrases, these having been previously explained and defined, for, if they are to learn the shades of meaning of the words of the language by observing the usage, this practice is obviously a good sort of usage. Of the instance the writer cites, we should say that the teacher of the deaf and dumb, who defined the word violate to mean break, following with this model sentence, "A wicked man violates the commands of God," had a good deal of his business yet to learn.

Mr. James Denison's really able oration at the dedication of the Clerc Memorial, is given in full. As an item of history, to say nothing of its literature, its preservation is important.

The Articulationists cannot complain that they are neglected; sixteen pages of the Quarterly are devoted to their i terests.

From the "Institution News" we learn that the new departure of the New York Institution "works very pleasantly thus far," and will add that we hope it is so. Miscellaneous paragraphs, some of which have a vein of humor and sarcasm running through them, make up the remainder of the number.

Clark, of the American Asylum for the Hartford Times, and being copied in the Journal. Little remains for your correspondent except to supply a few unimportant omissions and sketch some of the sidescenes. The mistake at the beginning of the Times report, crediting the monument to "the pupils and graduates of the Asylum" alone, is very properly corrected in the Journal; beyond this slip of the pen, there is hardly any error to

Nor need I remind those who were at Hartford, how the dreaded equinoctial storm came down a week earlier than it ought perhaps to make up for the weather having been so good while "Old Probabilities" (Prof. Cleveland Abbe) was in Hartford month before, at the Scientific Association meeting. Despite all delays, all discouragement, there was a goodly gathering of disciples of Mark Tapley, determined to be "jolly" under whatever circumstances. Only for a moment, however, the noose is slipped off, the wrappings thrown aside, and with bared neads and full hearts we greet the mon-

Turning to the Street, we see that the President of the National Deaf-mute College has just driven up with a party of ladies, and has been a witness of this first informal "unveiling" of the monument to his father's earliest fellow-laborer. No fitter representative could there have been, of those who are laboring to carry on to its highest development the work

Again the covering is removed for the operator sent up by Mr. Isaac White, the photographer. One negative after another is taken—three in all—from different points of view and all pronounced excellent. The proofs are promised for exhibition on the morrow.

Every train brings up visitors from far and near; greetings are interchanged, and animated talk follows, as easier imagined than described. But it would not be safe to describe, nor even to imagine, how that evening was spent by the young ladies how costumes for the banquet were brought forth and discussed, and beaux dissected, (I thank thee, Wilks, for teaching me that word!) and anxious glances cast at the midnight sky. The stars shone fair; but ladies' eyes are not the only stars whose light is treacherous. H. W. S.
